

Where to Find CS Jobs Summary

This lesson discussed several commonly used ways to find jobs. Most of these approaches are related to working for a company. The lesson discussed how to search for jobs from various types of Web sites, such as a company's career Web site, general job listing Web sites, and social networking Web sites. The lesson also discussed the importance of building your social network through volunteering and how to gain access to work study and internship opportunities. Last but not least, the lesson went over the benefits of developing an entrepreneurial mindset. Hopefully, you now have a solid grasp on how to find a work study opportunity or internship or on how to land a job in your field.
